

Technical Forum Announced For Mailing Professionals

Gunther International to Host Forward Thinking User Forum

NORWICH, CT –March 24, 2009- Gunther International, Ltd. (Pink Sheets: SORT.PK), a leading designer and manufacturer of high-volume, intelligent software-driven mailing systems announced its technical user forum - TechForum2009 - aimed at those involved in driving efficiencies and productivity in the mailing industry.

This year's must attend forum is focused around some of the hottest technologies and trends in the mailing industry and how they make companies manage their businesses smoothly and efficiently. The TechForum takes place on the 16-18 June 2009 in Mystic, CT.

"Information is critical to companies involved in mailing, and particularly how they exploit it" stated Marc Perkins, President and CEO. "This year's TechForum will showcase how to Get More Out of Less", and important skill in today's economy."

From industry experts presenting advanced methods for assessing and exploiting a variety of mailing solutions, attendees will have the opportunity to discover exactly how current and future problems can be overcome with the latest in technological innovations, as well as share common ideas and issues with their peers.

Topics will include "Improving Operator Efficiency", "The Future of Mail" and "Increasing Mailroom Throughput" are just some of the topics covered. Gunther will also be presenting its successful series of presentations on its own highly sophisticated and efficient hardware and software solutions.

A further component of the event will be the open discussions and roundtables where some of the most pressing issues currently surrounding the mailing industry will be explored and solutions collectively uncovered. Over a two day period they will focus on a variety of topics including cost reduction initiatives, comparative ROI metrics, operator issues and servicing, outsourcing and much more.

"There is a huge reservoir of untapped expertise among mailing professionals who are struggling to develop strategies to maximize the capabilities of their businesses," said Dan Flack, VP Sales and Marketing for Gunther International. "These professionals need an open forum to exchange ideas, understand issues that are confronting their peers, and review strategies to help them cope with performance problems"
